

SOCIETY OF
Clinical Geropsychology
RESEARCH | TRAINING | SERVICE

The Society of Clinical Geropsychology (SCG; Division 12, Section 2) invites applications for its Student Travel Award (previously called the Trainee Travel Award) to support trainees who want to attend the APA 2025 convention in Denver, CO, on August 7-9 in person. Eligibility requirements include student membership in SCG (requiring current enrollment in a graduate psychology program OR a post-doctoral fellowship) with an interest in the scientific or professional aspects of clinical geropsychology and attendance of the APA 2025 convention in person. Priority will be given to international trainees, first-generation graduate students, trainees presenting research, trainees who do not have other sources of funds for conferences, and trainees who are attending the convention for the first time. We also welcome applications from trainees who meet some or none of these priority criteria. Applicants will submit a 250–300-word statement detailing the following:

1. Whether you will attend APA 2025 in person*
2. Your status as a first-generation graduate student or as an international trainee (if applicable; an international trainee is considered a student or post-doctoral fellow who does not hold permanent residency/citizenship in the US)
3. Whether you are presenting research or are attending the convention for the first time
4. If you have additional sources of funding to attend this convention
5. What you hope to gain by attending the convention

Please submit your application by Monday, March 31, 2025, by emailing a Word Document with your statement, your full name, and the email address associated with your SCG membership to doug@olypsych.com. Up to 10 trainees will receive the $250 Student Travel Award and will be recognized at the SCG awards ceremony at the APA 2025 convention. Following the conference, we will invite the award recipients to provide a brief statement about their experience at the APA 2025 convention that might be included in a future SCG newsletter. We will ask recipients to write about what they gained from attending the conference, what this funding meant to them, and/or how this travel award furthered their interest in geropsychology.

*Note: We understand that applicants' in-person attendance to APA 2025 may be dependent upon receiving this funding. Please indicate that you are prepared to attend the convention should you be granted this award.
